

Juvenile White Ibis found at Shenango Lake, September 1, 2009, a shorebird normally found in southern coastal and inland marshes.

Nine Willets found at Duck Hollow (Pittsburgh), May 4, 2012.

These shorebirds were on their westward migration from the coast.

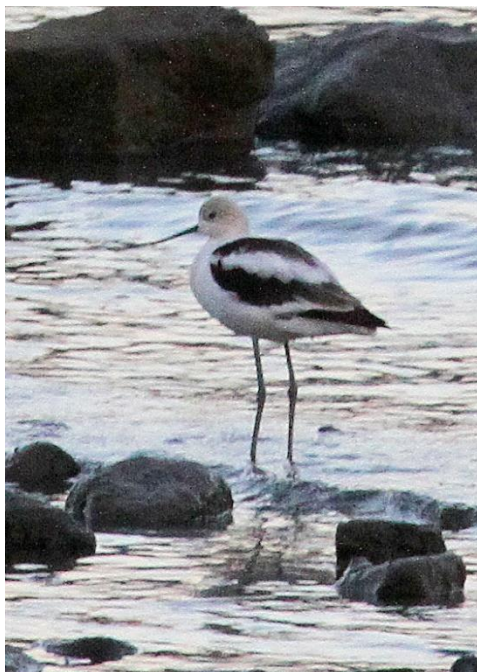

A Marbled Godwit found at Duck Hollow (Pittsburgh) on December 20, 2013. This shorebird is rare away from the coastline, but rarer still away from southern coasts and marshlands in December.

A Kelp Gull appeared at Duck Hollow (Pittsburgh) on January 18, 2015. This gull normally is found in the southern hemisphere in South America or Africa!!

This pair of American White Pelicans flew over Duck Hollow (Pittsburgh) on April 2, 2016. They are rarely seen east of the Mississippi except in Florida during winter.

Another western bird, an American Avocet, rested a few hours at Duck Hollow (Pittsburgh) on August 26, 2016.

An extra-seasonal Sora spent most of February into March, 2017 at Duck Hollow (Pittsburgh) instead of at warmer southern or Gulf coast wetlands.