

A special thanks to Roy Bires for informing me about and letting me photograph the leucistic female Northern Cardinal below, which has been a regular visitor to his yard for over a year. TJM

Female Northern Cardinal with both leucistic and normal feathers. Pink feathers are faintly colored. Note normal beak and dark eye.

-- taken in Swissvale 2017

The same leucistic cardinal showing her mostly white body with dark areas. Only primaries and tail feathers have normal coloring.

-- taken in Swissvale 2017

Leucistic sub-adult Ring-billed Gull lacking black wing tips and tail band but showing color on head and beak with dark eye.

– taken at Duck Hollow 2014

House Sparrow with leucistic primary feathers. Good coloring on most of its body.
-- taken in Squirrel Hill 2012

Male American Robin with leucistic feathers on wings and tail. Good coloring on most of its body.
-- taken at Duck Hollow 2016

Female American Robin with white splotches on wings and back. White areas also show on belly.
– taken at Frick Park 2016